SHOT IN HIS SALOON. HELD HER PRISONER.

May Prove Fatal to Farrell.

Possible Outcome of an Early-Morn- Dragged Into the Cellar of a First ing Park Row Barroom Row.

Reported Life-Long Friends but Six Other Men Implicated by the Quarrelled Over a Watch.

John Farrell, a selcon-keeper, thirtytwo years old, of 470 Pearl street, was years old, of 339 Jackson street, Long possibly fatally shot in his saloon, 166 Island City, was complainant in the Park Row, at 1.30 o'clock this morning by Patrick Masterson, fifty years old, Henry Reysan, of 4et East Thirty-38 Chrystle street, who was until recently a keeper in the Tombs Prison, and a former policeman.

Farrell has been unconscious since shortly after he was shot, and the surgeons at the Chambers Street Hospital give it as their opinion that he will die.

EX-KEEPER MASTERSON Masterson does not deny that he shot Farrell, but claims that he fired in selfdefense. He is contradicted by two wit who saw the shooting.

Farrell and Masterson had known each sidered intimate friends by the people who frequented the saloon, which is conducted under the name of Harren & Farrell. Masterson was a nightly visi-

Farrell. Masterson was a nightly visi-tor to the saloon.

Masterson wanted a watch which Far-rell owned, and last night the saloon-keeper sold it to him for $15, Masterson paying $10 on account.

Farrell and Masterson were drinking together until about 1.30 this morning, when Masterson showed a wad of maney.

when Masterson snowed a wad dromoney.

"You had better give me the rest of the money for the watch," said Farrell.

Masterson refused to do so, when somebody, he says, and he thinks it was Farrell, snatched a $29 bill from his hands. Masterson demanded of Farrell that the money be returned to him. Farrell denied that he bad taken the money, and he and Masterson quarrelled and grappled.

and he and Masterson quarrelled and grappied.

Masterson was knocked down. The witnesses say he drew a pistol and fired point blank at Farrell, who exclaimed:
"I'm shot!" and sank to the floor of the saloon, afterwards tottering to his feet.

Masterson's version is that after he was knocked down Farrell and several others who were in the saloon jumped on him and beat him frightfully, and, fearing for his life, he drew the pistol and fired.

Policeman Dennis McCrohan, of the on him and beat him frightfully, and, fearing for his life, he drew the pistol and fired.

Policeman Dennis McCrohan, of the Elizabeth street station, was on post at Baxter and Franklin streets, when a gyoung man ran up to him and told him that a man had been shot in Harren & Farrell's saloon. The policeman ran to the place, and found Farrell, who was very weak and bleeding from a wound in his abdomen, about to leave the saloon.

Farrell told the policeman he wanted to get to his home as quickly as possible, as he had been shot by Masterson and was badly hurt. He protested against going back into the saloon, where the policeman took him after turning in a call to the Chambers Street Hospital for an ambulance.

Masterson was still in the saloon and was placed under arrest. Frank Harren, who is part owner of the saloon, and Robert Sullivan, of 173 Fark Row, who were also in the saloon, said they had witnessed the shooting, and that nobody had interfered in the scuffle between Farrell and Masterson. Farrell, they said, had knocked Masterson down, and then the latter had shot the saloon-keeper.

When the ambulance surgeon arrived he found that the builet, a large one from a 38-calibre revolver, had entered Farrell's abdomen, and said that the man's condition was very serious.

The surgeon hurried his patient to the hospital, where he was put under the influence of other and placed upon the operation of laparotomy. The Superintendent of the hospital declared he did not know the nature of the operation, and declined to summon one of the surgeons to tell an "Evening World" reporter about it.

When the surgeons had finished their work and the effect of the drug had worn off. Farrell seemed as though about to regain consciousness but he again lapsed into a comatose condition, in which he remained for hours.

Coroner Flizpatrick, who had been sent for to take Farrell's ante-mortem statement, arrived soon after the operation had been concluded, but as the man was unconscious the effort to get his statement had temporarily to be abandoned.

Farrell's wife, a handsome young woman, who told the reporter that she had two children, arrived at the hospital about $1.5 or lock and naked to see her hisband. She was told that he was still unconscious and was obliged to wait.

Farrell recovered consciousness about 10.30 o'clock. The surgeous say that he has recovered from shock, and that there is a possibility of his recovery.

Masterson, who was taken to the Tombs Police Court, swore out warrants for Farrell. Sullivan and Harren, He says in his affidavit that these men attacked him and brutally beat him.

Harren and Sullivan were each held for examination the 15th.

Emanuel M. Friend, of Friend & House, is his counsel, Masterson, in a talk with an "Evening World" reporter in the Tombs Police Court, said that he had been attacked by Farrell, Sullivan and a man named McGuirc, and horribly heaten.

His appearance tended to prove his last statement. His head was covered with bandages and his left eye was swollen shut. He said that he was lying flat on his back and the men were beating and kicking him, when he drew his pistol and fired.

Acting under the advice of counsel, he refused to make a further statement. Masterson was a keeper in the Tombs Prison from February, 1826, to March 18, 1894, when he resigned.

He had a good record. Masterson is a single man, and told the reporter that he had known Farrell for years, and until last night's trouble, they had been intimate friends.

He said that he had just heard from the hospital that Farrell had a rhow for his life, and that he sincerely hoped the report was true.

Masterson was later arraigned before Justice Taintor and remanded to awalt the result of Farrell's injuries.

Mrs. McKenzie has had three children. They are all dead. Her husband, she said, is confined in a lunatic asylum. She earns her living by doing housework. She says she went to Quick's saloon at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and had a drink of whiskey. As she was about to leave, she alleges a man entered and asked her if she would treat him. She did so, and took another drink for herself. Then, she says, she lost all power to help herself, and she was dragged to the ceilar by the Italian and another man, who have not as yet been arrested.

There, she said, Bart and several others held her, while the bartender assaulted her. She was also held while the others assaulted her. It was almost 7 o'clock before she was permitted to leave the ceilar. She hurried to the East Thirty-fifth atreet police station and told her experience to Ward Detective Tierney. Tierney arrested the bartender and the bootblack. Reysan admitted that the woman had been in the saloon, but denied her story regarding the assault. Saloon-Keeper Quick said he had been in the place a portion of the time mentioned and heard nothing.

She was indignant, and ordered them out, cailing Hazelgren to assist her in ejecting them.

Hazelgren caught the man by the coat collar and hurried him to the street, where he let him go. Quick as a flash the fellow turned upon him, drawing a knife as he did so. He plunged the weapon into the right side of Hazelgren's throat, barely missing his wind-pipe. Then he forced the weapon to the right, making a gaping gash, from which the blood flowed in a stream.

The man threw the knife away and started to rim, falling into the arms of Policeman Ring, of the Oak street station. He summoned aid and the two women were arrested.

An ambulance soon arrived from Chambers Street Hospital, and the surgeon gave it as his opinion that hiazelgren would die. He was taken to the hospital. He is still alive, but there is little hope that he will recover.

At the Oak street police station the man who did the cutting gave his name as John Collins. He said he recently came from Boston, and is a sailor. The police say they think he is a crook.

Collins said he met Kelly last night on the Bowery. After drinking together police say they think he is a crook.
